A Veterans Conference, sponsored for the 11th year by Brevard Community College's Small Business Development Center, will be from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sept. 14.

The session in the King Center for Performing Arts will provide attending veteran business owners an opportunity to learn about government contracting and purchases, and time to network with other small business owners and business experts.

While all local business owners are welcome, the conference emphasizes helping veterans and many discussions will be on topics especially useful for vets.

Panels will include "The Future of Government Contracting" and "Veteran Business Resources," as well as a seminar on "Reconnection Marketing" held by Joyce Wilden of Buzz Biz PR.

In his speech titled "You've Earned It: Making the Most of Veteran Owned Business Verification, The New Standard," Keynote Speaker Phil Monkress will share his personal experience of being a service-disabled veteran and a small business owner. He is the CEO of All-Points Logistics, a Native American-owned small business that provides technical and management support services to the U.S. government and its prime contractors.

The sponsors of the event include FLORIDA TODAY, Harris Corp., IAP Worldwide Services, Craig Technologies Machine & Tool Division, Veterans Business Outreach Center, EDC of Florida's Space Coast, Brevard Workforce, and Florida MEP. These companies will be at the event to provide useful information with tabletop displays.

The entrance fee is $55.
